A NURSE'S FOOTPRINTS

A nurse's footprints go along So brisk in early morn. And leave behind a trail of footprints Trim—yet softly worn. Footsteps quietly stealing into the sands of time Striving for the great unknown More mysteries seek to find. Hidden secrets barbored within; The drama of Life, ceaseless to end. The miracle of Birth, the shadow of Death With Wisdom and Strength courageously met. The grief of Sorrow and laughter's Mirth. Undying Love; God's peace on earth. And so to God, our thanks we give For each little footprint; A story lived. With wakeful dreaming they face their task; A high road of Faith is all they ask.

CLASS HISTORY

"Lives of great men all remind ns we can make our lives snblime, And, departing, leave behind us Footprints on the sands of time; Footprints that perhaps another, Sailing o'er life's solemn main, A forlorn and shipurecked brother, Seeing, shall take heart again."

My, how time does fly! It seems but yesterday that we were standing on the steps of the Nurses' Home looking out toward our future.

Those first few weeks were filled with days of expectancy; days when our ambitions began to take form and our dreams began to come true. Will we ever forget the day when we got a change of wearing apparel—blue striped dresses with aprons and bibs, but no caps. Then there was our first day on the wards when all of the patients looked at us and said, "I believe you are new on the floor, aren't you?"

Soon our nine months of preliminary period was over. Nine months of going to and from the college to take Sociology, the first class to go co-ed, and nine months of studying and wondering later if we had a brain of any sort! Capping exercises marked our progress to the point where we were then considered a part of the hospital.

Our Junior year began with a narrow black band for our caps, more books and more responsibility. In that same year, the students of J. W. M. H. again attempted to make a go of Student Government which meant a closer relationship between the faculty and the students—more eleven o'clock passes per week and more restricitons. This was a word of which most of us became more than vaguely aware. Someone was always lonesome or felt in a singing mood after 10:30 p.m., when all was supposed to be quiet. And occasionally, we just could not make it back to the Nurses' Home by 11:00! This year was also filled with nights of selling any and everything, especially hot dogs and lemonade to raise money for the Junior-Senior Banquet. Basketball was another big feature which attracted the interest of the hospital staff and many of the industrial employees of this city. It was our pride and glory to win second place in the league since this was the first team in the history of James Walker.

Then came our Senior year marked by a wide black band and the beginning again of classes. An important move this year was the Annual. Any means of raising money was gladly accepted—including the selling of Christmas cards. The third floor annex was popular especially after 10:30 p.m., when we had our "bull sessions". We grew so close in the last few months that it seemed like one big family, the thing that we had been striving for since entrance to the big new Home.

Now that it is almost over, it hardly seems real—How could the time have passed so fast We will always be in debt to our supervisors and instructors who had so much patience with us in the learning process. And to our Doctors, our devotion could never be expressed in words, so we will just say—"You're tops with us."

May we, as we leave, carry with us the high ideals and standards that we have learned in these three years here at our Alma Mater.

ANNETTE NOBLES,

Historian.

LAST WILL

and TESTAMENT

We, the Senior Class of one-thousand nine-hundred and fifty-three of James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, Wilmington, North Carolina, being of sound mind and good intent, do, hereby make this Last Will and Testament.

Knowing and appreciating the unparalleled love and affection the underclassmen have for us, we feel that these valuable intellectual assets and sterling qualities of which we possess an inexhaustable abundance, should be perpetuated and improved on by them.

Having taken and done thusly, we find that we still have among our remaining stores of material possessions, as well as small trifles, which we each and singly do, hereby, bequeath to the below-named persons in hope that the recipient may use the grant or gift to elevate herself to that position which we Seniors have attained through our studious nature and who by reason of our modesty, refuse anything of greater or higher glory or honor.

Connie Williams: I saw something in a burlesque I shouldn't have seen.

Hazel B: What was it?
Connie Williams: My father!

Ellen Dail: The boys run after my kisses.

Nora Brown: That's nothing, they limp after mine.

Mrs. Jenkins was testing the knowledge of the pre-clinical class. Slapping a a half-dollar on the desk, she said sharply. "What is that?"

Linda Peterson: (replying instantly) Tails.

Jane A: I don't believe Margie King will ever get married. Justice: She will when the wrong man comes along.
